Headline:
Sunny spells and showers, heavy in west.

Today:
A mostly cloudy start with a few spots of rain but becoming brighter this morning with sunny spells and occasional slow moving showers developing. The showers heaviest and perhaps thundery across western Stirlingshire and southern Perthshire. Maximum temperature 21 deg C (70 deg F).

Tonight:
Some late sunny spells with showers dying out but becoming cloudier from north this evening with, especially in east, outbreaks of light rain overnight. Clear spells developing later in west. Minimum temperature 10 deg C (50 deg F).

Saturday:
Patchy rain in east clearing through the morning with sunny spells in west developing more widely. Most places dry through the afternoon, with just the odd sharp shower around. Maximum temperature 18 deg C (64 deg F).

Outlook for Sunday to Tuesday:
Mostly dry with sunny spells through Sunday and Monday with light winds. Tuesday sees sunny spells with occasionally heavy showers developing with a southerly breeze developing.
